What is threading?

Threading is an ancient and traditional method of hair removal that originates from Asia, in particular India. It is a skill that is passed down from generation to generation and is employed by Indian women when tidying, styling or shaping their eyebrows and removing any unwanted facial hair.

How does threading work?

The threader takes a length of 100% cotton, holding the thread at three points, the two hands and their mouth, they then proceed to twist and roll the thread over the clients face. As the thread intertwines and glides over the skin, the twisting strands pull out the hair from the follicle. It is that simple.

Does threading hurt?

Not really, there is only a small prickly, stinging sensation, in the skin as the hair is quickly pulled out. Sometimes the skin can be slightly red and sore, afterwards, this can be treated with some skin lotion or oil which is gently rubbed into the threaded area.

What are the benefits of threading?

There are numerous benefits of threading and it is highly unlikely that a person who has had a traditional threading experience will ever go back to other methods of hair removal.

Firstly, the thread that is used is very fine, this means that it is a far more precise technique of hair removal and it lends itself extremely well to the defining of eyebrows and reaching areas of the face that are awkward to get to.

Secondly, it is a lot quicker and easier than waxing or tweezing, nor does it damage one's skin, as the hair is skillfully pulled out from the root, which ensures a slower regrowth of hair, and when it eventually comes back, it is much smoother and softer.
